Returning from three years in the dungeon, Mechanization releases their second full-length album “Kenosis” which blasts to the core of all that is Mechanization. Whereas their first album “Holon” was an experimental voyage, “Kenosis” is a sledgehammer to the collective spine of mankind. Quite simply put: It’s a heavy metal champagne jam, and the world is invited to partake in the destruction. Every song was intentionally designed to split heads and crush souls. With tracks such as “Entering the Shed of Fire, and Taming the Serpent,” “Medieval War Song,” and “Ripping the Tusk from the Head of the Mammoth,” you can easily see that Mechanization holds nothing back and delivers the uranium (that’s the heaviest metal in the world for you Bieber and Gaga fans). Terronence’s vicious growls, HMT’s shredding riffs, and technology’s relentless groove deliver one sonic punch to the sternum after another. The forces beckoned to create this masterpiece are so brutal that legions of robotic dragons couldn’t stop the impending impact that all shall witness. Alas, words about “Kenosis” are the same as words about love, sex, and war--meaningless compared to the actual experience. So grab yourself an axe and a taco because the world as you know it will never be the same.
